

Joggers' Park turns training ground

With limited time available at stadiums, Delhi's Nehru Park is now a hub for young athletes

ANDREW AMSAN
NEW DELHI, JULY 13

CENTRAL DELHI'S Nehru Park, known as the hub for recreational runners, has of late been host to a bunch of junior track athletes, some of whom have even represented India. These trainees have had to resort to this venue as the Capital's stadiums, which reopened a few weeks ago, offer only short stints for practice.

"We athletes have a very high-calorie intake and once you stop training, you put on weight very quickly. During the initial lockdown, we sat at home and it was very tough. But now we can come to this park and at least maintain our fitness. I do my warm-ups in the grassy area and then take rounds of the jogging path. We are fortunate to have access to such a park," says Harendra Kumar, 2019 Youth 1500m national champion.

There are four coaches who train close to 50 students at the park now. Other youngsters are staying home due to the fear of the virus or have gone back home to their native villages, mainly in Uttar Pradesh and Haryana.

Coach Dinesh Rawat has been training his wards at the park for the last couple of months. The Jawaharlal Nehru stadium, where he coached regularly, has allotted two time slots of 45 minutes each, which according to Rawat is as good as not holding training at all.

"You can't fast-forward the training regimen and sitting home isn't a choice most of us have. For a young athlete, a month's training missed is like going back a year. They have to be active," explains coach Vipin Kumar, who was also forced to switch from the Nehru Stadium to Nehru Park to train his wards.

Training at Nehru Park is conducted in two slots and is mainly focused on endurance. "It's a blessing in disguise. The park has ample hills which we make use of for our strength and conditioning programme. The lawns are well maintained and have a lot of grass which ensures the impact of training doesn't cause any injuries," says Rawat.

There are limitations, of course. "Asking athletes to train without a synthetic track is like telling swimmers to train without a pool," says Vipin who is also a full-time coach at the Gargi College in South Delhi.

Then there's the transportation problem.

Most kids come from the outskirts of the city and can't afford private transportation. The biggest challenge, however, is to keep the athletes motivated as there is no tournament to target at the moment. Rawat, who at JLN would monitor kids from the stands, has now taken a more active role. He turns up every day wearing his running gear and trains with his wards. "It is just a way of encouraging them. Two months of training has resulted in a four-pack. I'm not far from six," he says.

However, there was a time when Nehru Park used to regularly serve as the training venue for some of the best athletes in the country. Legendary middle-distance runner Sriram Singh, who held the 800m national record for over four decades, trained at Nehru Park from the early 1970s to 1980s. The now-retired armyman competed in an era when the country did not have any synthetic tracks. India got its first track set-up for the 1982 Asian Games.

"I was with the Rajputana Rifles and our base wasn't far from the park. It was perfect for my training because there were hilly areas, flat surfaces, good grass cover, and a long-running track. I have trained here for several competitions including the 1976 Montreal Olympics," he recalls. Singh's performance in Montreal is considered the highlight of his career as he set the national mark of 1:45.77s which stood for 42 years before Jinson Johnson rewrote it in 2018.

"When we had camped for the preparation of the 2000 Sydney Olympics in Delhi, the Indian athletics team did its off-season and hill training at Nehru Park," remembers coach Rawat who eventually didn't make the cut for the final contingent.

"We used to train at the Nehru Stadium in the mornings and Nehru Park in the evenings. KM Binamol (two-time Asian Games gold medalist), Paramjeet Singh (who had broken Milkha Singh's 38-year-old 400m national record in 1998), Anil Kumar (former 100m national record holder), Rachita Mistry (former 200m national record holder), and Sriram Singh were some of the leading athletes of that time who used to train here," he adds.

Manchester City overturns 2-yr ban from Champions League

ASSOCIATED PRESS
GENEVA, JULY 13

MANCHESTER CITY successfully overturned its two-year ban from the Champions League on Monday in a surprising legal victory. The Court of Arbitration for Sport upheld City's appeal against the UEFA ban, but imposed a 10 million euro ($11.3 million) fine on the club for failing to cooperate with independent investigators.

Some UEFA allegations accusing City of finance rules violations dating back several years were "time-barred," the court said.

CAS plans to publish a detailed written verdict within days which could help explain why UEFA's case did not comply with its own internal rules. Man City joins Paris Saint-Germain, AC Milan and Galatasaray in beating UEFA in appeal cases in the past two years.

The decision by the three CAS judges clears the team coached by Pep Guardiola to play in the group stage of the Champions League next season. The case does not affect City's place in this season's competition, which resumes next month. City's win guarantees tens of millions of dollars in UEFA prize money next season. It also protects against players leaving to seek Champions League action with another club.

Guardiola had pledged to stay in Manchester "no matter what happens" in the courts. "The club welcomes the implications of today's ruling as a validation of the club's position and the body of evidence that it was able to present," City said in a statement.

UEFA punished Man City in February for "serious breaches" of finance monitoring rules and failing to cooperate with investigators. The allegations included that City, owned by Abu Dhabi's royal family, misled UEFA over several years to meet financial integrity rules — known as Financial Fair Play — required to enter European club competitions. City denied wrongdoing, and said it had "irrefutable evidence" the claims were not true.

"The CAS award emphasized that most of the alleged breaches reported by the Adjudicatory Chamber of the (UEFA club finance panel) were either not established or time-barred," the court said.

City's win will raise doubts about the future of the UEFA Financial Fair Play program, created in 2009 after the global finanacial crisis.

The system was used to ban several clubs, including Galatasaray in 2016, from one season of UEFA competitions. City was the first club to be banned for two years.

In a statement, UEFA pointed blame at its own club finance investigators and judges for "insufficient conclusive evidence to uphold all of the (panel's) conclusions" and not meeting a five-year statute of limitations. UEFA could choose to challenge the CAS ruling at Switzerland's supreme court. Federal appeals in CAS cases rarely succeed and only consider narrow grounds of legal procedure.

The urgent ruling came one month after a three-day hearing held by video link between Switzerland and England. A full verdict detailing the evidence, expert witness testimony and the judges' reasons is due within days.

UEFA-appointed investigators opened a case after leaked club emails and documents from City officials were published by German magazine Der Spiegel in November 2018. They were likely obtained by a hacker from Portugal. The published evidence appeared to show City deceived UEFA by overstating sponsorship deals from 2012-16 and hid the source of revenue linked to state-backed companies in Abu Dhabi. City never disputed the documents were authentic, but argued the evidence was stolen and reported out of context.

UEFA had previously signed off on City's submitted accounts since 2014. That year, UEFA fined City 20 million euros ($22.6 million) of its Champions League prize money in a first wave of assessments of European clubs' finances. French champion PSG got the same fine in a similar case.
